Last Modified: Feb 28, 2025

We at Delta6Labs are committed to protecting your privacy by securing the information you share through this website. Unless required for legal purposes, www.delta6labs.com does not share or distribute any user information with third parties.

We may gather the following information about you:

1. The Information You Provide

You may provide us with information about yourself in several ways, including filling out forms on our website or contacting us via phone, email, or other methods. This can include information you submit when you register to use our site, subscribe to our services, participate in discussion boards, or engage in other social media features on our site.

Additionally, it encompasses information you share when you report an issue with our site. The information you provide may include your name, address, email address, phone number, financial and credit card information, personal descriptions and photographs.

2. The Information We Gather

- Information related to the IP address, login information, time zone, browser type and version, operating systems, and platforms.
- Information including full uniform resource locators (URL), time and date of visit, products or solutions searched, page response times, download errors, page interaction information, and any phone number used to call our customer care support.
- When you explore any of our other websites or services, we might gather some information about you to enhance your experience. Your journey with us is important; understanding how you interact helps us serve you better.
